Dear Journalist,

Since first stepping into Chicago's rich music scene in 2009, duo Jen Reilly and Eddy Bluma, best known as The New Zeitgeist, have been steadily building a reputation for their effortless blend of traditional country, soul, and folk tied together by their unique soulful harmonies and lonesome spirituals.

"It's been awhile since I described a vocalist as having 'a great set of pipes' but that fits those of Jen Reilly."

— Richard Milne / WXRT Local Anesthetic

"Songs about redemption and temptation sung with yearning country vocals with just the right amount of heartbreak."

— Hannah Frank, OnAxis Music and Media

"Harmony in song and life!"

— Nick Digilio Show / WGN Radio

On their new album, Myths and Mortals, the duo explores the origins of oral folk tradition that touches outlaw and rock ballads, drawing heavily from suspenseful and captivating stories of fairies, earth, and work that call into our current socio-political times. Far-reaching, yet familiar; The New Zeitgeist calls from the deep to weary, worn trails of spirits lingering.

I would appreciate you taking a few moments to give The New Zeitgeist album, Myths and Mortals, a listen.
